Good Morning,

Re: Seeking the parents and/or siblings of

William Elias SPRADLEY, Sr. & wife, Mary McCAIN/McCLAIN/CAIN
1790/SC/Kershaw County/Camden District into MS/Newton County
& Jasper County

Best wishes and prayers going out to all of those that are in the path of Hurricane IVAN this morning.

I have been away from these lists for almost a year attending to important family matters but now I have returned and eager to see if there has been any progress made in finding SPRADLEY - McCAIN/McCLAIN/CAIN family connections.

My maternal 3rd great grandmother, Nancy SPRADLEY, born: 1816 in Newton Co.,
MS or SC, (md: husband, Hiram McCARTY,) was the daughter of Mary
McCAIN/McCLAIN/CAIN, born: 1790/Abt. 1790 poss. in SC & poss. in Kershaw County, Camden
District, SC, and her husband, William Elias SPRADLEY, Sr..

They are shown more fully below with dates, locations, and children and known grandchildren. I descend from their daughter, Nancy SPRADLEY, & Hiram McCARTY & their daughter, Martha Ann Caroline Matilda? "Caroline" McCARTY, & William
Tunley JONES, (CSA,) & their daughter, Rodella "Della" JONES, & Cicero Lamkin HATTEN & their daughter, Ethel Rosalie HATTEN, (md./widow of 1st husb: Joseph Marion WOMACK, Sr.,) & Louis Hector "Heck" SLAUGHTER, (twice widower # 1 wife: Callie Martha MUNN, (md./widow of 1st husb: Sam A.?/V.? ADAMS,) & # 2 wife, Mary LEE.)

I am eager to re-connect with cousins from this family whom I have communicated with before under my old email address: BandB4951@aol.com and BellindaMyrick@aol.com but now I have the following email address that I am using exclusively right now:

BellindaMBarnett@aol.com

Please contact me via the list or directly.

Ikard reunion marked by an odd twist

WEATHER-
FORD — The gathering of Ikards had the feel of a traditional family reunion. But I'll tell you about an odd twist.

The recent weekend of socializing counted Texans from diverse backgrounds, some descended from a one-time slave, others from a former slaveholder.

Unveiling a historical marker at the grave in Weatherford of Bose Ikard was the focus of the affair. You'll remember him when I mention that he was fictionalized by Larry McMurtry as the skilled black cowboy Josh Deets in Lonesome Dove.

Ikard is an old name in Texas ranching, ranking right up there with Goodnight and Loving. Rugged pioneers with those names generated history and inspired fiction.

For example, Lonesome Dove readers, sorting fact from fiction, recognize the adventures of Charles Goodnight and Oliver Loving as those of Woodrow Call and Gus McCrae.

As a kid, Bose Ikard was brought to Texas from Mississippi with three other slaves — a man and two mulatto women — by Dr. Milton Ikard, who moved his family to Texas in 1852.

Dr. Ikard, a hydropathic physician and father of five sons, was elected to the Legislature. (The political gene passed to his great-grandson, Frank Ikard, now of Washington, D.C., who served in Congress from Texas.)

The fortunes of the pioneer Ikards, Goodnights and Lovings were intertwined. Dr. Ikard sold one of the mulatto women to Oliver Loving. And after the Civil War freed the slaves, Bose Ikard joined the Goodnight outfit.

When Charles Goodnight and Oliver Loving rode west from war-depressed Texas in search of a profitable cattle market, Bose Ikard helped them blaze the Goodnight-Loving Trail from Young County to Fort Sumner, N.M., where the government was buying beef for reservation Indians.

After his years of cowboying, Bose Ikard lived many years in Weatherford. Although he died in Austin in 1928, his body was returned to Weatherford's City Greenwood Cemetery for burial.

When nonagenarian Goodnight, in his last year of life, learned that octogenarian Bose Ikard was lying in an unmarked grave, the old trail boss had a granite stone planted in 1929:

"Served with me four years on the Goodnight-Loving Trail, never shirked a duty or disobeyed an order. He was in many stamped

Candidates favor 'Down-ballot' hopefuls trot out the gimmicks

AUSTIN — Statewide candidates — the ones not running for governor — are desperately searching for a limelight. They're hunting with trucks, planes and bicycles.

On Friday, Republican candidate Rick Perry, running for agriculture commissioner, was flying aboard a World War II vintage B-25 bomber to "launch an offensive" against fire ants.

Two days earlier his Democratic opponent, incumbent Jim Hightower, said what he found offensive were "tax breaks to the rich" and "the S&L rip-off." In Dallas and three other cities, Mr. Hightower stood atop flatbed trucks and pushed populism and homemade doughnut holes: "They took the dough. At least we're going to get the holes to eat."

Two weeks ago, a Republican candidate for the Texas Supreme Court splashed into Galveston Bay, ending a two-month, 1,000-mile bike ride across Texas that

The fortunes of the pioneer Ikards, Goodnights and Lovings were intertwined. Dr. Ikard sold one of the mulatto women to Oliver Loving. And after the Civil War freed the slaves, Bose Ikard joined the Goodnight outfit.

When Charles Goodnight and Oliver Loving rode west from war-depressed Texas in search of a profitable cattle market, Bose Ikard helped them blaze the Goodnight-Loving Trail from Young County to Fort Sumner, N.M., where the government was buying beef for reservation Indians.

After his years of cowboying, Bose Ikard lived many years in Weatherford. Although he died in Austin in 1928, his body was returned to Weatherford's City Greenwood Cemetery for burial.

When nonagenarian Goodnight, in his last year of life, learned that octogenarian Bose Ikard was lying in an unmarked grave, the old trail boss had a granite stone planted in 1929:

"Served with me four years on the Goodnight-Loving Trail, never shirked a duty or disobeyed an order; rode with me in many stampedes, participated in three engagements with Comanches, splendid behavior. C. Goodnight."

A few yards away, the "Dean of Texas Traildrivers" is buried:

"Oliver Loving (1812-1867). Founder of three major cattle trails, Oliver Loving came to Texas in 1845 and to Parker County about 1855. During the Civil War, he supplied beef to Confederate forces. With Charles Goodnight as a partner on a drive to New Mexico, Loving scouted ahead of the cattle, was badly wounded by Indians, lay five days without food before his rescue, and died of gangrene on Sept. 25, 1867. His dying wish was fulfilled when his son Joseph joined Goodnight to bring the body 600 miles by wagon for burial in this county."

The crowd of about 100 in the cemetery last Sunday included Oliver Loving III of Jermyn in Jack County and Oliver Loving IV and young Oliver V, both of Euless in Tarrant County.

Oliver III told me about an encounter in Jermyn a couple of years ago when a stranger offered his hand and said, "Oliver Loving? I'm Charles Goodnight."

Well, the stranger was from the Panhandle and had been named for a distant relative, the childless cattleman Charles Goodnight.

Charles Goodnight's kinfolks do exist, but not in a line as direct as the numbered Oliver Lovings. At the ceremony, for example, was Mrs. Richard (Carolyn) Cree of Benbrook, a descendant of Charles Goodnight's brother, Elijah.

Ikards made up most of the crowd. None of Bose Ikard's kin still carry the Ikard name. But "black Ikards" and "white Ikards" — as they were called — mingled like cousins. They posed for photos and exchanged gossip.

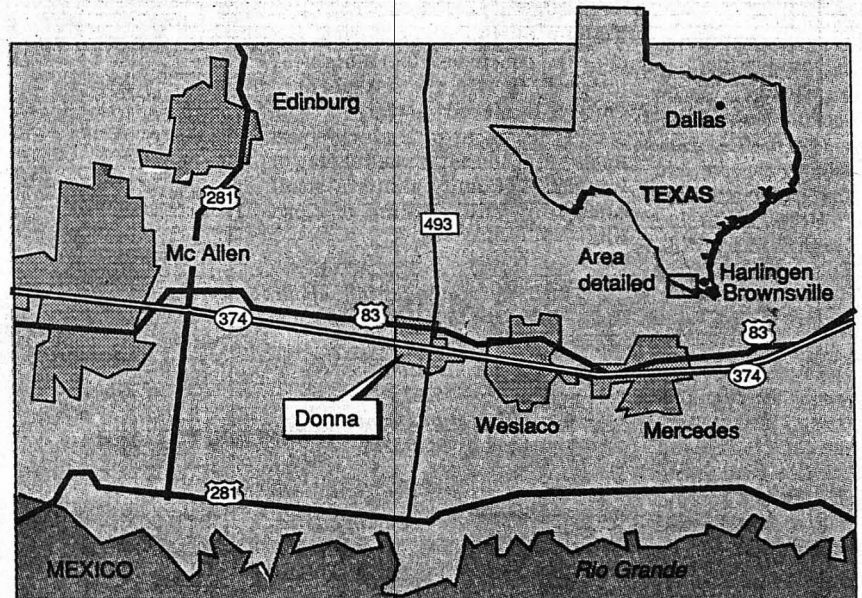

Speaking of gossip, here's that odd twist I mentioned. Charles Goodnight to his biographer J. Evetts Haley (Charles Goodnight, Cowman and Plainsman), described Bose Ikard:

"He was one of the best riders I ever

At first, it barely stirred across the nation's heartland. But with summer, its rumbling grew, and in the last month, it's become a monster that even the nation's top scientists can't stop.

It's the Great New Madrid Earthquake Panic, an emotional tremor set off by a Sandia Park, N.M., man's prediction that a quake could rock the nation's midsection within 48 hours of Dec. 2.

On Thursday, 11 quake experts assembled by the U.S. Geological Survey issued a 39-page report rejecting the prediction researcher Iben Browning of an earthquake along the fault that runs from Marked Tree, Ark., into the Missouri belt.

"Our panel found that Iben Browning's record for predicting earthquakes is about as good as that of someone throwing darts at a calendar," said USGS official Walt Ha

But emergency officials say the panic effort may have come too late. Across saw and a good hand. ... He was raised by the Ikards, was a mulatto, and I always thought he was old man Ikard's boy."

Holy cow.

"Old man Ikard" was, of course, Dr. Milton Ikard. Mr. Goodnight offered no supporting evidence for his speculation. And when I mentioned the trail driver's surmise to Ikards white and black, the reaction was a shrug, a grin, or comments of "Who knows?" or "It can't be proven."

Mrs. Tom (Lisa) Brown III of Midland had put together the Ikard reunion, the first to include Bose Ikard's descendants. She said plans are afoot for a bigger gathering next year in Austin that will round up not only Ikards white and black but all the Goodnights and Lovings.

Mary Kemp of the Parker County Historical Commission did the research that qualified Bose Ikard for his marker:

"Born a slave in Mississippi, Bose Ikard came to Texas as a child with the family of his owner, Dr. Milton Ikard. ... (Bose) Ikard became one of Goodnight's best cowboys and a trusted friend. Following his work in the cattle drives, Ikard settled in Weatherford. He and his wife Angeline were the parents of six children."

Their children scattered. Bose Ikard's granddaughters are Cleo McQueen and Florine Roddy, both of Weatherford and both at the ceremony, and Edna Jane Hopkins of Los Angeles.

Mrs. McQueen's son, Welton Woodfork Jr. of Dallas, and Mrs. Roddy's son, police Officer Leon Roddy of Grand Prairie, brought their families to the reunion. Their uncle, Melvin George of Weatherford, may be the only person who remembers seeing Bose Ikard.

"I was just a little boy. I can barely remember him," said Mr. George. "He was an old man. But he still wore a big hat, a big belt buckle and cowboy boots."

Ikard Smith of Wichita Falls gave a quick run-through of Ikard history for the crowd. Former Congressman Frank Ikard's son, attorney Bill Ikard and his wife, Kate, the daughter of television newsman Walter Cronkite, had brought their children from Austin.

Indeed, Ikards came from all over. Mac Ikard brought his family from Alaska, where he runs computers for Arco. The Ikards meet every year, but this year's center of attention was Bose Ikard.

Western writer Louis L'Amour said:

"There were not as many black cowboys as some recent writers maintain, and in the photos of the old trail drivers they are present but rare. Nonetheless, numbered among them were some of the West's greatest riders.

"My favorite, I believe, was Bose

Ikard, right-hand man to the great trail driver Charlie Goodnight. ... In a lot of research, I've never heard a bad word about Bose.

"He was a gentleman, an excellent horseman, a good cow-country cook, an excellent night herder, and a good fighting man."
